WINERY OVERVIEW

Sfera's at once terroir-driven, but also an interesting take on liters, and bottling wine in general. As Sfera says on their quirky site: Cosmic Verve in a Grounded Italian Liter...From the Alps to the Mediterranean. Sfera collaborates with multiple small certified-organic farmers to bottle liters in limited runs, and are keen to give the producer credit by clearly putting the winery's name and providence on the back label.

This all means that the producers change, but front labels don't. Another constant is that the wines are naturally made, and fall into certain guidelines that are lab tested before and after bottling. It's a win-win, small certified organic producers get to do a fun liter project, and Sfera drinkers get to explore Italy.

These are great introduction to natural wines, grape varieties, and growing areas.

TERROIR

Red clay

VITICULTURE

Harvested in the last week of August from various plots in the Casteggio commune at 240 meters above sea level. Vines are 25 to 30 years old and are guyot trained.

VINIFICATION

The grapes are co-fermented and spend 8 days on the skins with pump-overs twice per day. Fermentation with native yeasts. No fining or filtering. 60 mg/l total sulphur added during the press and at bottling.
